DINAH IN OKLAHOMA.

Dinah had made great preparations for teaching a class in the newly organized Sunday School at the settlement. Happening to meet her a few days after her undertaking to qualify herself to fill "that" position, she was surprised to find her classmate, who she was progressing in her labors.

"Fust rate, missus, fust rate; but I've been habin' trouble wid dat saloon keeper," she answered.

"How so?" I asked.

"Why," she said reflectively, "when I foun' dat we am all gwine to de Sabbath School, in course I wants my children to look as 'spectable as anybody's, en' I sakes up all de eggs, en' when I gits tree dozen I goes out to de garden en' looks it all over to see what I mout git out'n dat. We has some nice radishes, en' some lettuce, en' some airly inguns, en' bees, en' greens en' a right smart o' gairden truck dat white folks likes, en' I reckons dat maybe I kin git enuff out'n de hull on it to buy some new dresses fer de six gals, en' some cloth to make pants en' waists fo' de fo' boys.

"I gathers de gairden truck all up, en' washes eberything nice en' clean, en' ties it up into bunches, en' sprinkles it over to keep it green en' fresh, en' den I tells Pete to gear up de mules en' we'll go to town.

"I puts all dat nice gairden truck in a box, en' jes' befo' we gits dar I sets it up so dat eberybody could see dem purty pink radishes a showin' between de ingun tops en' a gleamin' between de lettuce leaves, en' I tells Pete to drive dar through de town, en' we'll stop on de udder side en' feed de mules, en' den come back en' do our tradin'.

"We hadn't more'n got dem mules fed befo' folks begins to come roun' de wagin en' looks at dat gairden truck, fo' it em de fust dat hab been brought in. De hotel keeper he come up en' says, 'Dem's mighty fine inguns you hab dar, Dinah; en' dem radishes too—golly, ain't dey purty?' I'll buy de hull lot en' pay you de money fer dem, en' de highest cash price, too."

"Wall, saiz I, 'dat am as good as euy body can do, en' we'll fotch 'em roun' after a bit.' Den dat saloon keeper comes walkin' up sorter careless like an' says, 'Hello, Pete, dat's mity fine gairden truck you got dare. Fotch it down to my place an' I'll buy it ob you.'

"No," saiz Pete, "I don't want no mo' o' dat whisky; it hab got yangle worms in it."

"Yangle worms," saiz he, "Wat in de world put dat in yo' head?"

"I seed 'em wid my own eyes," saiz Pete.

"Oh, git out," saiz he, "yo' must hab had snails in yo' boots."

"I felt like I had snails in my sum-ick," saiz Pete.

"Pshaw, what nonsense," saiz he, "t'was nuffin but a little touch o' bil-lyness. Jes bring dat truck down to my place an' I'll show you somefin' dat will cure you fo' shuah, if you eber was sick."

"Pete ain't gwine one step," saiz I, "we didn't fotch dem vegetables down heah to peddle off fo' whisky."

"Dis ain't a woman's gubment," saiz he, "and a woman hain't got no right to guberna her husband. Come along Pete, an' don't be bossed roun' by a woman."

"Pete," saiz I, "howse we eber gwine to raise dem children 'spectable if deir daddy will let hisself be coaxed off into a whisky shop eber time he comes to town? Stay where you is an' keep o' sich company."

"A family ob 'spectable niggahs. Who eber heard ob sich a thing? de saloon keeper axed, a turnin' up his nose like a sick alligator an' lookin' at me as de distemp'ered as could be."

"Mistah," saiz I, "I hab often read ob 'spectable callin' fam'lies, but who eber heard ob a 'spectable saloon keeper? Dar ain't no such thing. Folks won't eben look up to deir money. You may buy your daughter de finest silk dress in de hull Tur'ry, en' let her put it on an' go to church, an' some body's gwine to turn up deir nose an' say, 'Bought wid whisky money. I'd rather hab a calico bought wid bones' wages dan silk bought wid whisky.' It don't make no sort o' difference dat de pore chile ain't a mite to blame fur your low down meanness, somebody's gwin to say it jes' de same. An' you may buy your wife a sealskin sack, an' she may put it on an' walk down de street, and some stranger's gwine to see her lookin' so nice an' purty in dem good clothes en' say, 'Who am dat lady?' an' somebody dat knows you am gwine to say, 'Dat am de saloon keeper's wife, an' de stranger will say, 'An' many a pore drunkard's child hab gone cold and hungry fo' want ob de money dat bought dat sack.'"

"Shet yo' black mouf, you assy niggah!" saiz he, "If I was in Pete's place I'd let you know who was boss; I'd teach yo' to min' yo' own business an' not be a tellin' yo' husband what he shan't do. Come along, Pete, an' don't min' her. I'll gib yo' a good price for dat gairden truck."

"Mistah," saiz I, "yo' neber could hab been in Pete's place; I wouldn't a had yo' if yo' had ben de las' man libbin' in dis hull big roun' yearth, an' den de men dat was standin' roun' dey laffed an' spatted deir han's an' said, 'Good fer Dinah,' an' dat saloon keeper he gits mad an' saiz such insultin' tings 'bout me an' dat Yankee school missus dat he riles up ebery drap ob dat good ole Southern blood dat am discoursin' through my veins; an' I saiz, Mistah, yo' has neber ben ob any use at all to yo' follow man, an' I'll make yo' usef'ul for once, an' I'll tuk dat man by de back ob his neck an' dipped him into a little puddle ob watah dat am standin' dar, an' mopped de sidewalk wid him, an' he a-ickin' an' swearin' an' talkin' dreadful all de time. But I's powerful when I's riled up, an' he couldn't git loose from me a bit more dan es if he had ben fast in a co'n press. 'Dar,' saiz I, 'now go home an' don't be a tryin' to keep people from bein' 'spectful when dey wants to be,' an' de men dey laffed an' hollered an' made him so mad, an' he wanted de marshal to rest me fo' breakin' de peace, but dat officer he don't tote him dat Pete had stopped de wagin' outside de corporation an' he don't hab no jurisdiction."

"Well, Dinah," I saiz, "I see that you are bound to be one of the characters of the Territory."

"I don't keer any, jes so it am a 'spectful character," she said as she started homeward to attend to the wants of her happy brood.—Isadore Rogers, in The Voice.

Swollen Limbs.

Caswell Station, Tenn., June 23, '95.

About two years ago my limbs swelled up badly and continued to grow worse. I could hardly walk, and a sore broke out on my ankle. I began using Hood's Sarsaparilla and after four doses the swelling began to go down, and after taking one bottle was well.

North Carolina.

Francis D. Winston, of Raleigh, one of the leading Democrats in North Carolina, was at the Capitol, accompanied by Col. Julian S. Carr, the president of the league of Democratic clubs in the Tarheel State. Mr. Winston was very prominent in the gathering in Raleigh during the last campaign of the clubs from the various North Carolina cities.

"It seems to me," said Mr. Winston, that the Republicans and Populists have secured a hold upon North Carolina which can not be shaken off for some time to come. They have not yet decided upon the details of the new election laws which they propose to pass, but they are working in harmony and will evolve something that will go far toward perpetuating their control. Marion Butler, who is to succeed Senator Ransom, is a great organizer and a man of considerable ability and since the election has developed very materially. I would not be surprised, either, to see the eleven electoral votes of the State divided in 1896 between the Republicans and the Populists. The latter will get six and the Republicans five if by fusion they carry the State over the Democrats."—Washington Post.

Ungrateful.

Secretary of State John M. Palmer of New York told a good story about his wrestle with the civil service.

"When I was elected," he said, "there was one little place which was wanted by a friend of mine. He was an old soldier, without much money, and a man thoroughly competent and trustworthy. I promised him the place. When I came to appoint him, I found that it was under the civil service. I told him to go and take the examina## tion, and then I'd fix him. He came out fourth on the list as it was returned to me.

"I looked over the returns. The first man had been a little lame on spelling. I objected to him. He would never do. The second could spell all right, but was a little lame in his handwriting. I got rid of him. The third wrote a dictionary and spelled like a dictionary. No flaws were visible. Then I remembered that he was inclined to be extremely convivial. So I said, 'I'll appoint him, and the first time he gets drunk I'll fire him for cause and then appoint the man I want.' So I appointed No. 3, and what do you suppose the ungrateful rascal did?"

"Well, I'm blessed if he didn't take the pledge the day he commenced work and has never taken a drink since."—New York World.
